CHINA AFFAIRS AT HOME.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

London, Jan. 26, 1877.

The Chinese Embassy appears to be "shaking down," but only by small degrees. I hear that the landlord of the mansion in Portland Place, which has been engaged for His Excellency, does not altogether appreciate the peculiarities of Chinese life, of which evidence has already been given. What can be done in a Yamen, with perfect propriety and the fullest recognition of the exigencies of the Tao-ty, may not be exactly fitted for the inside of a house in a fashionable part of London. A day or two ago, I was passing down the street without knowing that the august Kiao-tai-tai had taken up his abode there, when I came across some of his Yamen runners hanging about outside the door in the style so familiar to those who have seen the Chinese at home. I spoke to one of them in the Peking dialect, and he entered very readily into conversation, evidently as much pleased as surprised at finding a "foreign devil" turn up so unexpectedly, who was sufficiently enlightened to speak "Mandarin." I talked away for some two or three minutes, just as I would with the Yamen runners we came across when "up country" on a shorting excursion; but I was soon reminded that a foreigner speaking Chinese to a Celestial was not an ordinary thing in London by the formation of a select audience who were beginning to watch the proceedings with open eyes and open mouths. Chin-tai said the accompanying runner, and ushered me into the Hall—a plain English hall, not a Chinese Tang; where he begged me to be seated in the regular Chinese fashion by which usually about half-an-hour is taken to arrive at one's seat so as not to be a second before your host. The interview did not go beyond a little formal conversation as to the journey of the Tuh-jen, the magnificence of the steamers and such generalities as are usually indulged in on such occasions; and as I knew one of the Chinese attaches to the Embassy, I left a card for him and took my departure. I must confess it seemed somewhat strange to find all the familiar surroundings of a Chinese residence in the heart of London; and I could not but reflect upon the startling illustration which the Chinese afford of the truth of the proverb, cuius in animus mutant, qui trans mare currunt. There were our old friends. After a journey of 15,000 miles, and in place as different from those to which they are used as it is possible to conceive, with precisely the same style and manner and with the same nonchalance as if they were in their own dear Chinese cities, with its narrow dirty streets, bawling coolies and savoury smells. I suspect the Embassy will not be over popular unless it adapts itself a little more than it has done as yet to European tastes. It is early yet for complaints to be made on this ground; but I hear that a large number of very well-behaved and refined men here—none of your prejudiced and ignorant foreign residents in China, as some are too ready to represent them—are not by any means hostile so much inclined to admire His Excellency Kuo as, for example, Sir Thomas Wade or Mr. Hart. It is not yet decided when the Ambassador is to be presented to Her Majesty; but this event will no doubt come off shortly; and I am credibly informed that there is a chance of "Lady Kuo," as she is called here, also being presented to Her Majesty. In writing about this my last letter I ridiculed the idea, as suggested by the "special" of one of the London dailies; but I have since heard from reliable authority that Sir Thomas Wade does not consider that the presentation of the mei-mei would be out of order, and, contrary to what is generally understood to be the case, looks upon the position of "wives of the second degree" as perfectly respectable. Sir Thomas Wade ought to know more about this kind of thing than anybody else; but I am very much inclined to believe he is mistaken. I suspect that careful enquiries will be made before any presentation takes place. Any way, however, I cannot help thinking it will be a mistake. The Chinese, left alone, would never expect that "Lady Kuo" would be presented; and the foreign advisers, whoever they may be, who have recommended that step have, to put the matter in the mildest form, at the very least entrenched needlessly upon very delicate ground.

The Standard gives a lengthened account of four new gun-boats designed for the Chinese Government; and two of them have already been built by Sir W. Armstrong. They consist in the first place of a vessel, having each a load displacement of 325 tons, with a draught of 7 feet 6 inches, and carrying each a gun of 27 tons. These two vessels have made the voyage to China in a most satisfactory manner, showing themselves able to cope with some tolerably rough weather. The voyage from Aden to Point de Galle, a distance of 2100 nautical miles, was made without break and with perfect ease, under steam and sail, the vessels reaching Fien-tain by the end of last November. It is observed that these gun-boats made their voyage from England to China with their guns and ammunition all on board, and fully prepared to go into action had occasion required it. The remaining two gun-boats are of peculiarly formidable character. They are twin vessels, and in the former case the length is 115 feet, with a beam of 30 feet, the draught being 8 feet, and the freeboard at these feet. The load displacement is 430 tons, and the speed under steam nine knots an hour. Each vessel carries 50 tons of coal in her bunkers, besides which she can carry a certain quantity in sacks on deck. The vessels are iron built and have numerous compartments, especially in the forepart, where injury is most likely to occur. The engines are below the water line, and the boilers are nearly so, the latter being further protected by the coal which surrounds them in front and on the sides. The shell-room and the magazine are entirely below the waterline, and are protected from splinters by a horizontal bulkhead. The engines are surface-condensing, and are highly expensive in their principle of working. In consequence of fuel is considerable, so that under ordinary circumstances these vessels could make 1600 miles under steam, alone. But they are armed with two tripods, each being fitted with two tripods, and each limb of the tripod being tubular, and one of the tripods being made to receive the topmast when the latter is lowered. The steam propulsion is by twin screws, and the foregoing method of masting provides for a minimum of rigging so as to diminish the risk of the screw-propellers being fouled in action by fallen cordage.

It is evident that the Chinese are at present, thanks to the valuable foreign assistance they are able to command in so many directions, thoroughly acquainted with the best ways of obtaining efficient gun-boats and munitions of war. I should think there is some little art in bringing these new gun-boats before the notice of the public just at the time when the Chinese Ambassador is about to settle his negotiation at the Foreign Office. At all events, the coincidence is worthy of note.

Police Intelligence.

(Both Magistrate Sitting.)

March 6, 1877.

HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

George Batten, a private H. M. 28th Regiment, No. 657, was again brought up for having robbed a Chinese shopkeeper of $2 at Shum-shui-pa in Chinese territory on the 4th inst. The prisoner was committed to trial, after having been duly cautioned. He reserved his defence.

ANOTHER HIGHWAY ROBBERY.

James Barnard, a private H. M. 28th Regiment, No. 591, was again brought up for having robbed a collector of insects of some cash and two cases of insects, and for having assaulted another man with intent to rob him. The Magistrate intimated to him that he would commit the case for trial, after the usual caution, the prisoner stated that he was walking along by himself about 1 past 2 o'clock on the 4th. He saw nine soldiers come down by a road. One of them had a helmet. Prisoner met Private Shaw, hesitated and he asked him to give him a light. He did so. The man said, "I am going a different way," and went his way, while prisoner turned off from the Camp, passing the Police Station, when the Police Inspector called him back. He asked him how far he had been, and whether he had been near the Black Rock. Prisoner replied that he had not, and did not know where it was. The Chinaman then said he was the man, and the Inspector took him into custody. Private Michael Shaughnessy was then called. He said he saw Barnard at 2.30 p.m. on the 4th, about half a mile on the Kowloon side of Yowmahtee. They were together about two minutes, and he gave witness a light for his pipe. They then parted, and witness left to go to the Camp. Witness saw about eleven soldiers half-a-mile off at the same time. Three of them had helmets on. The prisoner was then formally committed to trial.

SEMI-HIRE.

John Crick, a steward unemployed, was charged with being drunk and refusing to pay chair-hire. The Hon. O. May fined him $1 and ordered him to pay 20 cents chair-hire. The defendant was identified as having been convicted of a similar offence on the 6th.

UNLAWFUL POSSESSION.

Wong Aching and U-tai, coolies employed at Messrs Spratt & Co.'s yard, were charged by Mr. J. M. Emanuel with having in their possession several small pieces of old wood. Fined 50 cents each.

CURIOUS AND WONDERFUL.

Ohin Ahan, a boiler-maker, was brought up on remand for having broken the arm of Mak A-han, No. 1 boiler-maker at the Novelty Iron Works. More conflicting evidence was taken, each side adhering to its own theory of the affair. The prosecution maintained that the attack on the complainant was deliberate, and the defence asserted that the complainant attacked the defendant with an iron hammer, who then struck him with an iron in self-defence. Mr. Russell fined the defendant $50, in default three months' hard labour, and to be imprisoned for one month. He was also to pay $250, or one month's imprisonment. Mr. Holmes appeared for the prosecution and Mr. D. E. Caldwell for the defence.

LATE TELEGRAMS.

(Straits Times.)

EUROPEAN NEWS.

Constantinople, Feb. 6.—The negotiations for peace which were entered into by Midhat Pasha, between the Turks and Servians, have been suspended. The direct cause of Midhat Pasha's fall is unknown. Meanwhile, he has been banished. London, Feb. 9.—In the Lords last night, Lord Granville urged the united action of the European Powers in coercing the Porte to accept the proposals made by the Conference. The Duke of Argyll and the Marquis of Hartington accused the Government with changing its policy.

London, Feb. 10.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons, Sir Stafford Northcote explained that the omission of any allusion in the Queen's Speech, to the late disastrous Cyclone in Bengal was due to the absence of Lord Salisbury from London.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 10.—The Russian Press considers it would be needless for Russia to wage war against Turkey, whose fall will be quicker through internal anarchy than from any foreign attack.

London, Feb. 12.—Liberal organs commenting upon a Blue Book on the Eastern Question, approve of the attitude of Government during the Conference; but attack it for not stopping short of a policy of coercion whereby it could prevent the isolated action of Russia. The Times in an article on the Eastern Question says that the country will go with Lord Derby in his policy.

Constantinople, Feb. 12.—Peace negotiations between Turkey and Servia have been resumed, the Turks having withdrawn their demand for a guarantee. Midhat Pasha had arrived at Brindisi, and in reply to an English despatch, he attributed his exile to Russian intrigue.

London, Feb. 13.—In the House of Commons Mr. Gladstone gave notice that on Friday next he would bring forward a motion asking how Government understood a treaty engagement, in view of the despatch sent by Lord Derby to Sir H. London, Feb. 14.—In the House of Commons last night, Mr. Fawcett brought forward a motion for the reappointment of the Committee of Enquiry on the Finances of India. A lengthy debate followed, and the motion was finally rejected by 173 against 123 votes. The motion of Mr. Smollett, calling upon the Supreme Government to stop public works involving loans, and to put an end to the distinction between ordinary and extraordinary expenses, was also negatived. Lord George Hamilton opposed the Enquiry as being futile and untimely, until the Indian Budget had been passed. He protested against Mr. Smollett's accusing officials in India of cooking accounts. He said that the Indian revenue was improving, and that the gloomy forecasts respecting it were groundless.

London, Feb. 15.—The Khedive has appointed Gordon Pasha Governor of Sudan.

INDIAN NEWS.

Calcutta, Jan. 31.—The Government of India have deprecated the continuance of efforts in Madras to relieve distress by resorting to private benevolence. They apprehend that the consequence must be that benevolent institutions will be starved by the diversion of their ordinary means of maintenance. There was heavy rain and thunderstorm here last night. The temperature is unusually high, and crops are in magnificent condition everywhere.

The railway in Gujarat with grain. Allahabad, Feb. 1.—It is said that explanations were actually issued last October for the admission of natives to the higher executive posts, but that very shortly before the Imperial Assembly, these were suddenly modified, so suddenly that the portion of the report before Sir Richard Temple went to the Assembly actually treated of the admission of natives to the same posts as an accomplished fact.

Bombay, Feb. 2.—A Hindu official has been appointed to a compensated post.

Bombay, Feb. 6.—The famine report for the week ending 31st shows 30,000 fewer employed on account of the deterrent scale. Expenditure over twenty lakhs. Prices rather lower.

Calcutta, Feb. 10.—The number on relief works in Madras for the week ended the 8th instant decreased thirty-two thousand. The decrease occurred in Cuddapah, Bellary, Coimbatore and Tinnevely. There was an increase in Kurnool, Chingleput, Salem, Nellore and Madras. The number on relief works in Mysore is forty-one thousand. There is no material change in the districts.

JAVA.

(Singapore Daily Times.)

The following items of intelligence are translated from Java papers down to the 15th instant:—

Batavia, 24th January.—Captain Reynolds of the American (not Siamese) barque Lucie, navigating between Batavia and Bangkok, suspected of ill-treating a cardriver, was yesterday brought into the House of Detention. A fourth witness of the ill-treatment has been traced out by the police. The wound on the card-driver's head is an inch broad and extends across the whole skull. Reynolds continues to deny having struck the man with an iron pin. He states that he merely gave him a push or a kick, whereupon the man fell, and inflicted upon himself the wounding by means of an anchor that lay casually in the way. In any case he considers it strange that in this country, a European should get into trouble or be even imprisoned for such an affair. —Samarang Courant.

The card-driver who was wounded in such a manner on the head with a piece of iron by the captain of the schooner Elise, that his life was despaired of at first, is now wholly recovered. We understand that the said captain will be tried next week. —Java Bode, 15th inst.

The collision between the steamers Willelm Kroonprins der Nederlanden, Hagere, and the Atjeh, Van de Grel, on the 8th November 1876, when the former was on a voyage from Singapore to Batavia and the latter from Batavia to Singapore, whereby the first named steamer was sunk and several persons were drowned, has resulted in the two Captains being tried at Batavia for manslaughter with respect to the drowned persons. The Batavia Dagblad of the 15th Feb., thus notices the case:—

"The captains of the Willelm Kroonprins der Nederlanden and Atjeh which came into collision on the 8th Nov. 1876 whereby three Chinese were drowned have been on their trial before the Court of Justice here since the day before yesterday. The reports of experts put both in the wrong, but the Captain of the former vessel was more than acquitted of the latter. To-day the argument of counsel was heard. It is generally expected that both will be acquitted. The reported fact of the actual drowning of the three Chinese persons will probably be furnished with difficulty."

Regarding the E. Coast of Sumatra the following intelligence has been made public:—

"The judicial inquiry by a commission sent from Batavia into the ill treatment of coolies laid to the charge of two Europeans has ended; against one of the two, no witnesses for the prosecution could be found on the spot. During the inquiry charges of a similar nature were made against three others. Several capitalists interested in East Sumatra tobacco estates have formed themselves into a committee in order to bring forward and further their interests and those of the planters with the Government, both in Netherlands India and the mother country. Mr. E. J. van Hemert is counsel for the committee. General has already drawn up and sent to Deli for the signature of those interested, in which there is urged a better regulation of the relations between employer and employed."

Batavia Dagblad, 15th Feb.

"A telegram from the controller of Langkat received at Pinang on the 10th instant runs as follows:—'With a tobacco planter murdered on the 5th instant by Chinese coolies in a Chinese coolie-shed, on his estate on the upper Batang Serangan, 8 hours rowing above Tanjong Pura. On 6th instant inquiry held on the spot; murderer arrested, and has confessed; 25 Chinese, his probable accomplices, taken up. Causes—bad quality of the coolies along with imprudence on the part of the murdered planter—Occurrences is isolated.'"

THE CHINESE EMBASSY.

As may be imagined, considerable sensation was caused in Southampton by the arrival of the Chinese Embassy, which took place on Sunday, the 21st inst. Before the magnificent steamer Peshawar, one of the finest of the P. and O. Company's fleet, had come alongside of her moorings at the Dock; a vast crowd had assembled to witness the expected landing of those who to so many were interesting strangers from afar. To persons who are familiar with China and the Chinese the intense curiosity of the mass of people here seems very natural; but still, when the difference of language and manners, and especially when the difference of the Chinese and European mind is taken into consideration, it is not surprising that the Chinese should attract attention. His Excellency Kuo came alongside, although many of his fellow-passengers came ashore in the Lady of the Lake. The numerous suite of the Ambassador landed, some in the business-like style which attaches to the Chinaman who has already been abroad and seen something of the world, some with their eyes in all directions and evidently quite unfamiliar with the foreign surroundings in which they found themselves placed; others, again, with the peculiar sway which distinguishes the well-bred Frenchman or Englishman—were the subject of remarks both humorous and humorous on the part of the crowd. If some of the observations made were not perfectly complimentary they were all friendly and good-natured; and if a crowd forms any indication of what public opinion is likely to be, the Ambassador ought to be contented with the sentiments of the British public. The landing was not of a very imposing character, and was in fact merely an official recognition that the Embassy was landed here. His Excellency Kuo did not look the worse for his journey, and generally, a good specimen of the natives, and has not the slightest apprehension of the Flower Land. In the suite of the Ambassador are Liu Si-Hung, two Chinese Secretaries, and Dr. Macartney, of the Seaking. Arrived. Mr. W. C. Billier was present from the Foreign Office, and Captain Gillson, the Superintendent of the P. and O. Company at Southampton, and Mr. J. W. Dyson and Mr. P. Hedger, as representing the Southampton Dock and the London and South-Western Railway Companies, also "assisted." The steamer Peshawar was delayed in consequence of an accident. She had been telegraphed from Hurst Castle at two o'clock in the morning, and would have arrived in due course about three hours afterwards; but in the dense fog prevailing she about three o'clock grounded on the Brambles, and remained there till the next high water at two o'clock in the afternoon, and it was consequently getting towards dusk when the Ambassador and his party landed. The Embassy did not make any stay at Southampton, but left at once for London in a special train provided by the South Western Railway Company, and consisting of five saloon carriages. For the convenience of the party it was run into the dock alongside the steamer, and must have impressed the Chinese Ambassador and his friends with at least some of the conveniences of railway travelling. The train left for London at ten minutes past five in the evening.

The "Special" of the Standard gives the following description of the "feminine element" of the Embassy:—

We had understood previously that the Chief Envoy had brought two wives with him, but this is not the case, only one of the ladies claims the title of Lady Kwoh. We had the honour of being introduced to her, and were rewarded by a charming smile for our salutation. She appears to be in the prime of womanhood, with most pleasing features of the Mongolian type, and an exquisite complexion, cosmetics notwithstanding. Her hands are small and finely shaped, with taper fingers, only some of them are spoilt by having very long nails. This is to show her high breeding, that she cannot dress herself or adorn her hair. Hence she has two ladies' maids, who, although not fourteen years of age, are skilful in doing up back hair and other feminine accomplishments of the coiffure. The manner this was done appeared elegant, in the disposition of the jewels which adorned her head, and the glittering earrings, which we shall not attempt to describe. Suffice it to say that the style is that one adopted in North China, which differs from the South in that part of woman's attire, and consists of a broad band of velvet over the forehead, set with gems. The effect is very pretty, and serves for a bonnet to keep the head warm in cold weather. Then the bootkins which covered her "golden lilies," as ladies' feet are called in the flowery language of China, are superbly embroidered with gold, which contrasted exquisitely with the rich tints of the silk and satin drapery in the loose robes above, and the unmentionables below. We should say that her first appearance at Court, or elsewhere, will create a pleasing sensation. Her companion is an elderly lady, who acts in the capacity of a duenna, and the two maids are slave girls, trained up to the business from their childhood, and assist their mistress in her musical accomplishments. As the four rose up to take their departure from the ship, some of the charm was gone on seeing Lady Kwoh walk out of the cabin, for the small feet do not add to the graceful movements of the body, and of course no Chinese lady dances. —L. & C. Express.

mocking song which still finds a place in French collections of chansons comiques, and is certainly very diverting. Here is a sample of its quality in a free translation:—

I've seen a wretched loud sigh
Without evincing any fright;
Have seen an army sing "To arms!"
For half-an-hour, but never fight.

I've seen a maid descend in A,
Fly the perfidious one in B,
Come back to sing her wedding day,
And perish in a minor key.

I've seen the realms of bliss eternal
(The songs accompanied by harp)
I've seen the pit of pains infernal,
With demons shouting in six sharps!
